

Tyvek wristbands are supplied with a die-cut area at the end of wristband, which is meant to prevent tampering and illegal use of the access token. In other words, if one tries to reuse and remove the wristband, the die-cut will give in and break apart. The die-cut area is therefore a little more delicate than the rest of the wristband, so a little attention is required when the wristband is put on and when the protective label is removed.

Remove the protective label from the adhesive sideways, hold one corner of the label and remove it partly sideways across the die-cut.

You can do this at any speed you like, just do not use too much force!
